

Letter From The Deaditor

The Ghoul Life

Who would have thought that you could have so much fun publishing a magazine about death? Well, we do, and it has been a blast! Girls and Corpses now sponsors horror film festivals, presents awards, throws signing parties and events, reports from the red carpet at dozens of Hollywood screenings and premieres, exhibits at conventions around the country, and Corpsy even hosts The Miss Dead Beauty Pageant all over America. We have been featured on: Entertainment Tonight, G4 Attack of The Show, Inside Edition, E-Entertainment, TMZ, Oddities, American Horrors, Current TV, Radar Online, and in such magazines as: Entertainment Weekly, Bizarre, Wired, Stuff, FHM, Penthouse, LA Weekly, The Star, Heavy Metal, Hustler, Fangoria, Total Guitar, Rue Morgue and many others.

Death has been very good to Corpsy, who is perpetually surrounded by beautiful girls and rotting corpses. Who could ask for morgue?

This issue ratchets up the fun and sexiness with the proverbial May-Dead-cember romance of Courtney Stodden and her betrothed (and thirty-five years her senior) actor Doug Hutchison (The Green Mile) who married her at the tender age of sixteen. Courtney is now eighteen and ripe for photographing, and so we bring her to you in her very first nude spread! Yes, we even beat out Playboy Magazine! Take that Hef!

But Doug didn't just get one young bride; he got three with Courtney's rambunctious sisters: Courtland and Courtina. I dined with all of them recently and they are hilarious. I am certain we will be seeing Courtney and her crazy sisters on TV and film in the coming weeks.

This issue is also a reunion of some of Girls and Corpses top alums: Eli Roth is back to tell us what he's up to since The Last Exorcist 2 and Aftershock; lead singer Dani Filth of Cradle of Filth updates us on his new gruesome album; famed illustrator Laurie Lipton again illustrates our hallowed pages; crazed cartoonist Steve Vincent returns with his "Fun Ways to Kill Your Children" and fresh kills; and Lawrence R. Harvey (The Human Centipede 2) is back at the sweet end of the centipede.

Life is full of twists and turns, as is Girls and Corpses Magazine, and no one knows how or when we will be dead and buried, but we will continue to bring you great comedy and horror that you are dying for until the last nail is pounded in our coffin.

So, rejoice in this happy union of Courtney Stodden and her handsome decaying corpse.

You may kiss the dead.

Rot on,
Corpsy
